Cookie's Treasure Hunt

"GOODNESS!" said Angelpuss, dimpling. "I can't go to the class picnic with ALL of you! But I've got a WONDERFUL idea—I'm going to organize a TREASURE-HUNT—and the winner will be my escort!"

All of the boys—Cookie, Jitterbuck, Zoot, Hep and Downbeat—thought that the proposition sounded fair enough, and the details were soon arranged. The treasure was to be ANGELPUSS, who would arrange all the clues. She entrusted Zoot with the job of delivering the first clue to each of the boys separately, to be opened at seven that night. The idea was that if they could decipher that clue, it would tell them where the second clue was to be found, which in turn would lead to the third clue, and so on.

It would have worked out wonderfully if Zoot were willing to play fair. But he feared one adversary—COOKIE! And he was so determined to come in ahead of his rival that he opened the envelope containing the first clue hours beforehand. It didn't take him too long to figure out the place it directed him to—but would this give him enough of a lead over Cookie? It was a news-flash from the radio which gave him his great idea. "POLICE ARE STILL SEARCHING FOR THE NOTORIOUS 'PURPLE FEATHER'!" it proclaimed. That was the gangster who left a purple feather on the scene of all his crimes. PILLOWS have feathers—and Zoot had PURPLE INK! It didn't take long to write a new clue for Cookie's special benefit, either!

Promptly at seven, Cookie opened the envelope that Zoot brought him. Inside was a smaller envelope, sealed, and a slip of paper reading: "1123 Main Street. Give sealed envelope to man behind desk." Why, that was SIMPLE! So straightway Cookie headed for his destination. It was flanked by two green lights, which made him grin. Trust Angelpuss to have even the police working with her! Barging within, he surprised the desk-sergeant at the task of polishing his glasses. "This'll identify me!" cried Cookie breezily, handing the small sealed envelope to the officer, who peered at it near-sightedly, opened it and withdrew—A PURPLE FEATHER!

To the startled Cookie, it seemed that an earthquake had broken loose. "IT'S HIM!" shrieked the sergeant. "GET HIM!" A club whizzed past his ear. The tall desk crashed to the floor as the sergeant launched himself over it. And Cookie didn't wait for anything more. Like a bolt of lightning, he was outside the door, running fast—but behind him came the beat of footsteps, the shrilling of whistles! It was the beginning of a nightmare of pursuit. Once, Cookie thought he had escaped, but finally a police searching party routed him from the barrel in which he had hidden, and the two-hour chase was on again! Heading down a narrow alley, he saw a dark and seemingly abandoned building ahead. Even as the police drew near, he scrambled through a half-boarded-up window, into the dark interior. Opening a creaking door, he shot suddenly into a lighted room, surprising a group of hard-looking men who had been seated around a rough table. "Ya—ya gotta hide me!" blurted Cookie, panting. "The cops are comin', and—"

"COPS!" howled the leader of the group, a burly, scar-faced individual. "Out the back way, fast—IT'S EVERY MAN FOR HIM-SELF!" Caught in a panic-stricken rush, Cookie found himself borne through a back door—again running! From behind came yells, a scattering of gunshots. And before him was the scar-faced man. They were in the center of town, passing good old Harelip High School, when Cookie tripped, lunging into Scar-face and bearing him to the ground, where the man's head hit the pavement with a resounding crack. It was at this breathless moment that a figure detached itself from the school steps and darted toward them. It was—ANGELPUSS! "COOKIE!" she cried. "How WONDERFUL you were to go through all those clues—and get here first! YOU'VE WON THE TREASURE-HUNT!"

The dazed Cookie gulped. Before he could rally his addled wits for a reply, there was a thudding of feet—and he was in the hands of the law! A flashlight glared in his face, and a disgusted voice said, "Heck! THIS can't be the POIPLE FEATHER!"

"Of course not!" blazed Angelpuss, indignantly. "It's just Cookie O'Toole, silly!"

"Then who's THIS?" asked one of the policemen, kneeling over Scar-face's recumbent body. A moment later came a cry of amazement. "LOOK WOT HE'S GOT ON HIM, CHIEF! THE STOLEN CARTER JEWELS—AN' A BAG FULLA POIPLE FEATHERS! IT'S THE POIPLE FEATHER HIMSELF!"

The police swarmed about Cookie in a congratulating horde, and it was this moment which Zoot picked for his arrival. His jaw dropped as he took in the scene, unnoticed. Then he jammed his hands into his pockets and faded into the night, bitterly contemplating the failure of another great scheme.

But Cookie didn't know this. He couldn't figure out exactly what had transpired, or how it had all come about. But as Angelpuss clung to him fondly, he did hear the police captain tell him that he was going to get a big reward for the capture of the Purple Feather. And it was then that he was able to speak his first lucid words. "Reward?" he said. "HUH! I'm gonna get an even BIGGER reward! I dunno how all this happened—BUT I'M GONNA GET TA TAKE ANGELPUSS TA THE CLASS PICNIC!"
